Flying from Wilson to a Mara airstrip costs more per person than a road transfer, but it saves five to six hours each way and reduces vehicle fatigue.

On a three day safari, flying can effectively add a full game drive, which changes the value calculation. On a longer trip, road transfers spread the cost over more days.

Baggage limits on light aircraft mean the road option budget shared Masai Mara safari suits travellers with heavy camera kit or large luggage. Compare total trip cost, not the transfer line alone, including the extra night a road transfer may require. Full comparison is at %LINK%.