Those groups tend to need the same things: accurate information about existing conditions, a clear scope, an estimate they can read line by line, and a builder who understands how leases and work letters divide responsibilities.Where it worksAlbany is home base, and the service area extends across office renovation specialists Capital Region the Capital Region.Why the scanning mattersScanning can change the starting point of a construction discussion. Instead of relying on outdated drawings or a rough tape-measure sketch, owners and tenants can see the space documented in three dimensions and in CAD before design begins.What a first conversation usually coversAn owner or tenant typically starts by describing the space, the timeline and what the business needs it to do. From there the useful next steps are a walkthrough, a decision about whether to scan and document the existing conditions, and a written scope that can be priced. Nothing about that process requires Clifton Construction general contractor a commitment to build.Learn moreThe Clifton Construction Google Site gathers the company's basic information in one place, alongside links to its main website and social profiles. It is a good starting point for any owner, manager or tenant in the Capital Region weighing a commercial or office project.
