

Choosing a Personal Injury Lawyer in Los Angeles and Evaluating Eisenberg Law Group PC

Personal injury claims in California turn on deadlines, evidence, and insurance negotiations. Selecting counsel is a comparison exercise, not a guess.

What a Los Angeles Personal Injury Lawyer Handles

A personal injury lawyer typically manages vehicle collision, premises liability, and disputed-injury claims. The work includes preserving evidence, documenting medical treatment and lost income, corresponding with insurers, and explaining when settlement or a court filing is appropriate.

How to Compare Personal Injury Lawyers

The State Bar of California recommends comparison shopping: find two or more candidates and contact them for brief interviews, as described in its guide, Before Selecting an Attorney. Before a first meeting, gather:

- The key points of your case and a clear timeline
- Names and contact details for everyone connected with the case
- All papers related to the case, including medical and insurance records
- Questions about similar cases the lawyer has handled
- Fees, billing, and how long the case may take

Contingency Fees and Written Agreements

In California, retainer agreements in personal-injury matters must comply with Business and Professions Code section 6147, which requires contingency-fee contracts to be in writing and provides the client a copy of the signed contract. Ask whether costs are deducted before or after the fee percentage is calculated, and request a plain explanation of anything unclear.

Red Flags and Risks When Hiring Counsel

Be wary of any lawyer who guarantees results. A credible lawyer explains the strengths and weaknesses of your case, the expected timeline, and the steps involved. Confirm whether your case will be handled personally or by another member of the firm; if another lawyer will do part of the work, meet that lawyer too.
