Renovations are exciting right up until the contractors leave and you see the dust. Fine particles from sanding, drywall and floor refinishing settle on every surface in the house, including rooms nobody worked in. Post renovation house cleaning in Roanoke helps you actually enjoy your new kitchen, refinished floors or freshly painted rooms. The Happy Housekeepers has been doing this kind of work across the Roanoke Valley since 1979.

Customer reviews on the company website mention exactly these situations, including cleaning after floor refinishing and after painting. Those jobs leave behind dust and residue that ordinary tidying cannot handle. Dust from sanded floors, for instance, drifts into closets, coats window sills and sits on top of door frames and ceiling fans.

The company also offers builder and contractor cleaning, so its crews are familiar with the extra work that follows construction. For a homeowner, that experience translates into a thorough clean that reaches the places renovation dust hides. Blinds, baseboards, window sills and ceiling fans are dusted, furniture dusted or polished, carpets vacuumed and hard floors mopped.

Kitchens and bathrooms need special care after a remodel. New counters, cabinets and fixtures are often coated in fine dust or adhesive haze, and the room needs a complete clean-up before it is ready to use. Specialized services such as washing walls and woodwork and cleaning light fixtures help remove the dust that settles on newly painted trim and freshly installed lighting.

Timing is important. It is best to schedule a post-renovation clean once the contractors are fully done, so new dust is not created after the crew leaves. Many homeowners book the clean for the day after final touch-ups, giving them a fresh home before furniture goes back into place.
