

The bow is as important as the violin itself, and yet it is often the last thing a player upgrades. LVL Music Academy's violin shop in Singapore stocks a selection of quality bows to suit players at different levels, and Alan Senejani can advise on bow selection with the same depth of knowledge he brings to instrument assessment. A well-matched bow improves the ease of tone production, the response across different dynamic levels, and the physical comfort of playing. For students who have reached a certain level, upgrading from a student bow View website to a quality pernambuco or carbon fibre bow can make a significant difference to their sound and enjoyment of playing. Alan's expertise as a luthier extends to bow assessment, and he takes the time to help customers understand what to look and feel for when trying bows. For advanced players looking for a specific bow characteristic, whether that is a firmer stick for articulate spiccato or a more flexible shaft for singing legato lines, LVL's team can discuss the technical aspects in detail and help narrow down the options from the current stock.
