What is a Live Casino?

At its core, a live casino is an online video gaming platform that streams real-time casino games from specifically designed studios or real land-based gambling establishments. Instead of betting a computer algorithm governed by an RNG, players engage with expert human dealers by means of high-definition video feeds.

Players can put bets using an intuitive digital interface on their computer system, tablet, or mobile phone, while enjoying the dealership spin the wheel or deal the cards in genuine time. Features like live chat allow players to interact with the dealership and, in many cases, with fellow gamers at the virtual table. This level of social interaction bridges the space between singular digital gaming and the dynamic neighborhood of a physical casino.

The Technology Behind the Magic

The seamless experience of a live casino is made possible by sophisticated technology running behind the scenes. It is not merely a web cam pointed at a table; it is an intricate environment of software and hardware.

- Video Game Control Unit (GCU): Every table includes a GCU, which is a gadget encoded in every table that encodes the video broadcast and assists the dealer in managing the game.
- Optical Character Recognition (OCR): OCR innovation is important for table games like Blackjack and Roulette. It transforms physical actions (such as the cards dealt or the winning number on the wheel) into digital data, allowing the software to immediately credit wins and losses to player accounts.
- Several Camera Angles: High-definition video cameras capture the action from numerous perspectives, giving gamers a cinematic view of the gameplay, close-ups of the cards, and scenic views of the studio.
